Ready or Not, Here Come the Holidays

By David C. Mauldin

I have a confession: I'm not one of those people who gets super excited about the holidays. Charlie Brown has his little tree, and I think that's overdoing it, just a little.

I could spray a veneer of piety over my Bah-humbug attitude and say that I resent the commercial trappings. This is true. For me, Christmas is about worship. We sing hymns, hear the Christmas story, and share the Lord's Supper—what more is there? That's Christmas! I love that. The hustle and bustle don't do much for me.

That's true, but it's not the real reason. There are things about the holidays I enjoy. I like seeing people. I like giving presents. Receiving them is nice too. And the football—my only complaint is there's not enough of it. And yet, despite all of this, the holidays ring a little hollow for me.

I think they do for many people. We have these expectations. (This will be the best Christmas EVER!) But they don't work out. Thanksgiving and Christmas are supposed to be magical times of joy and family harmony. Then we wonder why our family isn't more like that perfect family in the Publix commercial. We build the holidays up so much in our imagination that the real thing must let us down.

Some people embrace the holidays with the enthusiasm of a child. Others buzz around in a non-stop whirl of activity and miss the true meaning because of their celebration. Still others get the holiday blues. Me, I try to catch the true meaning, but I am always a little wary of the holidays. The real reason I am this way is, I see the pain others are suffering.

Over the years, several people have said to me, "I wish I could go to sleep the day before Thanksgiving and not wake up until January 2." They were grieving. Their loss changed the holidays for them. The holidays can be difficult for those who are grieving, especially those who are facing the holidays for the first time since their loss. There is a lot of that pain around us, and I pick up on that. It flavors the holidays for me. I am not here to lament the holidays or the grieving process, however. I want to help and encourage.

Ready or Not, Here Come the Holidays cont'd

Allow me to offer three suggestions for the holidays that benefit, not only those who grieve, but all of us.

Make worship primary.

Whether you host a dozen parties and entertain hundreds of guests or you decide not to decorate or send cards this year, make worship your focus. During November I will be preaching a series called “The Joy of a Thankful Heart.” In December we will celebrate the Incarnation and birth of the eternal Son of God. If you are in a festive spirit, don’t miss the main idea. If you are blue, nothing cures a hurting heart like giving thanks and praise.

Set reasonable expectations for yourself.

If you are grieving, it is OK to say no to things you don’t feel like doing. You don’t have to cook that big turkey dinner or send all those cards or even watch football. If you enjoy decorating, decorate. If you want to go to the party, go. But give yourself permission to take the holidays at your own pace.

Set reasonable expectations for the holidays

We go through seasons in our lives, and the holidays change. Christmas with small children in the house is different from Christmas with an empty nest. Try not to measure this year against other years. Instead, receive it as a gift from God. I suspect most of the emotional difficulty we have with the holidays comes from setting unreasonable expectations: “I’m supposed to feel ____, but I don’t.” Let that kind of thinking go. Embrace the true meaning of each holiday and accept it as a gift God has given you: “This year, whatever my circumstances, I will give thanks to God. This year, I will celebrate the birth of his Son.”

If you are grieving, because of a death, divorce, or other loss, consider attending our Coping with the Holidays Grief Workshop. Saturday, November 4, at 10:00am in Lower Langill. Valette Porter and I will talk about the grieving process, the hope we have in Christ, and offer practical strategies for navigating the holiday season. This year Christmas Eve falls on a Sunday. We will have a combined worship service in the morning at 10:00am in the sanctuary. We will have a contemporary service in the evening at 5:00pm and a traditional service at 8:00pm.

FROM THE MUSIC DEPARTMENT

Joanne Raulin, Principal Organist

"Speaking to one another with psalms, hymns and songs from the spirit. Sing and make music from your heart to the Lord."

Ephesians 5:19

Our musical groups here at Palm City Presbyterian Church are so wonderful and talented. For two weeks, I had the privilege of leading the Chancel Choir until Brad returned. It was a very good pleasure to work with them, and they sang beautifully!

The Bells of Praise rang two musical selections at services in October, and they were magnificent! They have improved so much, and have become a very professional group.

The Kids Ring! bell choir is preparing to ring in November, and they are improving all the time. They're so much fun to work with!

It is a joy to be the organist and bell choir director here at PCPC, and I pray that all the music that is presented is inspiring and uplifting to you as a congregation.

Musically yours,
Joanne Raulin

ANGELS OF THE MONTH

by Janet Sallman

If you were to see one of our angels around the church you would likely see the other, too. These angels acolyte together and each has read scripture during the 11:00 service.

Both also play in the Kids Ring bell choir. One of our angels takes piano lessons from Joanne Raulin, our organist, so musically she is one step ahead. But as a tribute to his hard work, the other angel has caught up to his sidekick remarkably well in his ability to read and play the music.

After bell rehearsal all the kids have pizza. Our angels are so in tune (get it?) with each other what one angel leaves behind on her plate the other always finishes off. The angel who routinely finishes off the pizza then leaves his buddy to join the Youth Group hosted by our new Youth Director, Jason Pridmore. They have delightful personalities, are full of energy and smart to boot. Our angels for this month are Annika and Zachery Tucker.

Deacons Refocus Pastoral Care

Last January, the Deacons of Palm City Presbyterian Church changed their service focus from local missions to pastoral care of members, to more closely align with the deacon model found in the New Testament. To ensure that local missions were not slighted, the Mission Committee of the Session took on extra responsibility.

Initially, each deacon took one or two of the geographic areas already served by the church's Shepherds and made contact with members on the Shepherds' lists to find out what their needs were. After some trial and error, the deacons have decided, with the leadership of our new senior pastor, that a more effective way to meet the needs of the congregation would be to focus on the specific types of needs of the members. We will still be coordinating with the Shepherds, but won't be using the list of members that belong to the Shepherds to guide offering services. Currently, the deacons are forming pastoral care teams that will focus on specific areas of need such as:

- members who are caregivers for parents, spouses, or children—whatever the need that demands extra time and attention at home and can readily lead to “caregiver burnout”
- members who are homebound or in hospitals, rehab facilities, nursing homes, or assisted living housing
- new members of the PCPC “family” who would like help getting acquainted and possibly getting involved in church activities (e.g., greeter at the door before services start)

- members who have recently lost loved ones and are grieving and need someone to “come alongside” to share in their grief, listen to them, and encourage them
- members who are experiencing significant life changes, are dealing with family concerns, or are facing serious health/wellness concerns These new teams are in addition to the Hospitality Team that has already been assisting members in planning memorial luncheons and receptions as well as planning food and beverage service for church functions.

Key to the effectiveness of these new pastoral care teams will be open, honest communication (each of us with ourselves and others) mixed with a good dose of confidentiality. Most of us love the attention and concern that comes from our friends during difficult times, but we are hesitant to actually ask for help. Some of us see ourselves as very “private” people who want to keep our troubles to ourselves or others out of our business. Some of us even see ourselves as so self-sufficient that we don't need help—that is until the troubles get big enough that we no longer know how to deal effectively with the stress or are starting to have physical illnesses of our own. So I encourage you, if you could relate to any of the above bullets yourself or know of another church member who fits one of the bullets, please contact either the church office, Pastor Mauldin, or myself (Deacon Moderator), so your name and need can be communicated to the right deacon team who will reach out to you.

We don't know just yet what all the services and opportunities will look like—we anticipate we will be on a “learning curve” for a little while, but the deacons want to be both helpful and sensitive to those members who would like support for their specific needs. We do not, however, want to be intrusive. Think of this as a “opportunity” to try something new, a way to possibly gain new coping skills, or just a way to make a new friend who will share in whatever circumstances are currently troubling you.

You will be hearing more about what deacons are doing in this newsletter in the months to come.
Carole Peterson, Deacon Moderator

The Shepherds continue to provide a wonderful connection with our church family by sending out cards, making some phone calls, and very importantly praying for their Flock.

We want to welcome John and Linda Sanders as our newest Shepherds! The Sanderses are going to shepherd the Willoughby Flock. We look forward to their sharing God's love with their Flock. Thank you to Patti Miller for her work as their past Shepherd.

We have gone through some changes in the last few months with our Deacons. Pastor David, along with four Deacons have set a different direction for the Deacons. They will no longer be overlapping what the Shepherds have been doing and they will not be working from our Flock lists. Just briefly, the Deacons are developing service teams that will minister to our church family on an "as needed basis". The teams are: hospital visitation, bereavement, caregivers (focus on children), caregivers (focus on adults), hospitality, new member assimilation, homebound care and family concerns. Therefore, the Shepherds will continue their ministry of sending birthday, anniversary, get well, thinking of you cards; making occasional phone calls; and praying for members in their Flock.

Thank you for the commitment you, as Shepherds, have made to stay in contact with our church family. The Shepherds provide a vital ministry in the church life at PCPC and we are very thankful for your work!

On October 16 our Shepherd for Sand Hill Cove, Doris O'Connor, planned a dinner for the residents to have a time to talk and share a meal with Pastor David Mauldin and his wife, Rosalyn. Also included in the evening were Sherrey and Jason Pridmore (Youth Director), Jerry and Carole Peterson (Deacon Moderator), Charlie and Susan Rosseau (Shepherd Coordinator), and Jolynn Whitten (Executive Director of Sandhill Cove). It was a grand evening of laughter, sharing stories and eating delicious food. We had 45 members from PCPC who are residents attend the dinner. Doris did an amazing job of planning and organizing the evening. It was truly a wonderful time for all!

If you do not know who your Shepherd is, please let me know. We want to make sure everyone in the congregation knows they have a Shepherd and who that person is. You can call me at 772-286- 8347 or email me at socmom425@att.net. It is a privilege for me to serve and work with such wonderful Shepherds. I would be remiss without thanking Mrs. Enid Tatje for her vision almost 30 years ago for this program. What a blessing for PCPC!

Susan Rosseau, Deacon Moderator

Youth in the Keys

“Rise up and Rebuild.”
-Nehemiah 2:18

These words from Nehemiah are a call out to God’s people to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem destroyed by King Nebuchadnezzar so that the city inhabitants might once again feel the safety and comfort, protection and strength the walls once provided, when they are restored.

There is a transformation of heart and mind people undergo when they no longer live in the ruins of life but rather live in the hope that newness and restoration bring. In much the same way, we see Jesus continually restoring the broken and rebuilding the ruined, giving them a life-transforming hope that only a relationship with Him can bring. Is this not the mission of us all? To bring this hope, this encouragement..... Jesus to others? Love your neighbor?

belongings, lives strewn throughout their yards and streets; and many still without electricity and unable to enter their homes due to the amount of foliage, water damage and mold.

For 2 days our crew went house to house clearing debris, removing trees and telephone poles, bagging brush, sweeping, raking, and sorting through people’s ruined belongings. Many of the homes we went to were elderly folks who could not do the yard clearing themselves. Even though there is still a lot left to clean up and recovery process, it was nice to bring a little hope and encouragement to those right in the middle of this disaster.

Though many of the items previously asked for

This month our church and youth literally did just that.

Loaded up with hundreds of pounds of cleaning supplies, yard tools, chainsaws and more (donated by our church families), our team of 14 traveled to the hurricane ravaged Florida Keys, to offer any assistance we could to the ongoing relief efforts there. What we found was heartbreaking and troubling; a landscape reminiscent of a third world country, with mountains of debris and garbage lining the roadways; people’s homes, are no longer needed, for months and maybe years, there will be a need for “people power” down in the Keys, to continue with the restoration process. We will be looking to send teams down in the future to continue participating in the relief efforts. If you are interested in a future trip or would just like to go down on your own and lend a hand, please contact Jason Pridmore for more information. We want to continue to help those affected by the recent hurricanes and share the hope and love that we have through Jesus.

I thank all of you who donated items and money to our youths' efforts in the Keys. I also thank you for your prayers and support for our team as well as the people we went to serve.

A time for pictures, stories and experiences shared by our youth will be offered in the near future. Please look for those announcements and come hear what God has been doing in and through our young missionaries.

The Mission Team at Palm City Presbyterian Church has been a long time sponsor of the Mobile Food Truck in conjunction with the Treasure Coast Food Bank. The Treasure Coast Food Bank is one of the largest relief organizations on the Treasure Coast providing millions of meals throughout our local counties.

Volunteers are asked to pre-bag food delivered by a semi-truck from the Treasure Coast Food Bank. The bags are then distributed to clients' cars as they drive-by. As much as 40,000 - 50,000 pounds of food can be distributed in one morning.

Volunteers are needed to help distribute food on Saturday Nov 4, 2017 at Martin County Fairgrounds (2616 S.E. Dixie Hwy, Stuart, FL). We will begin at 8:00am and conclude around noon. Please come dressed for the weather (sunscreen, raincoat, closed-toe shoes etc.)

News from our global missionary in Pakistan

An area of Gujranwada, Pakistan is where 30 Christian churches got together in early October for their biggest evangelical meeting. There were over 5,000 people who attended the day-long conference. Patrick McMahon, our own Nancy McMahon's son, preached at the meeting. Pastor Nasir Minhas (many of you will remember that we skyped with him from his home in Pakistan early in the spring, just before Sunday School) was joyous to report that, "many of those who attended the meeting received Jesus and accepted Him as their personal Savior."

Our missionaries in foreign countries truly have the heart for our Lord and the talents to do what Our Lord has asked of us: To be fishers of men. Our statue in the courtyard is our constant reminder to do that work for the Lord, too.

Trina Ortiz-Gonzalez is going on a mission trip next month. I (David Mauldin) asked her to share with the church family about her trip, her sense of calling, and her faith.

Minute with a Missionary

DM: Trina, tell us about the trip. Where are you going? What will you be doing?

TO: From Dec 2-9, I will be going to El Salvador on a medical mission trip. This mission trip is organized by Hand of Hope, through Joyce Meyer Ministries, a faith-based ministry. Their medical ministry is highly organized, and I will be working with a medical team, providing health care to the population in need.

DM: You work in the medical field, right?

TO: I am a Nurse Practitioner in urgent care. I've done that since 2009. Before that, I worked in family practice. I've also worked in public health and as a flight nurse for the U.S. Air Force.

DM: So God called you to a vocation helping people medically, and now you feel a call to use your gifts and expand your ministry on this trip?

TO: I have had this in my heart, I believe, since I was a little girl—from wanting to become a Registered Nurse, Flight Nurse, later a Nurse Practitioner, with the desire to travel. I came to realize all this preparation for my career, from public health, to the Air Force, to urgent care has led me to what really has been brewing in my heart for a long time. That is to participate in a Medical Mission. Not just what's in my heart but what God has placed in my heart, His calling and His guidance.

I have had this in my heart, I believe, since I was a little girl—from wanting to become a Registered Nurse, Flight Nurse, later a Nurse Practitioner, with the desire to travel.

DM: Is this your first mission trip?

TO: Yes, it will be my first mission trip, so needless to say the excitement is there, with some jitters as well.

DM: I trust the organizers will look after your safety. What are you nervous about?

TO: It is my first mission trip. I am a little nervous and excited of the unknown. Meeting and working with medical team members for the first time makes me a little nervous, but I tend to work well in new environments, as I'm very flexible. It will also be the first time I will be away from my children for an entire week. I know they will be in good hands, but I will miss them.

DM: How did you pick El Salvador?

TO: I wanted to stay close to Florida, in the Western Hemisphere.

DM: You have three boys. Giovanni is age 12, and Adriel and Julian are twins, age 9. What do they think of your trip?

TO: When I first told them they were very excited. They love to travel, and they wanted to come along. They said they would love to go and help! I told them it was only for adults at this time. They said when they're older they want to be involved in helping and serving as well. I told them God has placed gifts and abilities in all of us; these gifts should be used to serve others. I definitely would love for all of us to be involved, as a family, some day, God willing.

DM: Tell us about your faith.

TO: I grew up in both Lutheran and Catholic faiths—Catholic mostly, because I went to a Catholic school and university. My grandmother was Presbyterian, and I was familiar going to her church as well. So as far as “religion” is concerned, I know it very well. My faith and intimate relationship with God however, is a whole other story. Experiences in my life, and having to trust the Lord in situations where I didn't have any answers, is where I started to dig deep. My passion grew to know Him more and more.

DM: What brought you to PCPC?

TO: I was born in New York and raised in Los Angeles. We moved here to Palm City in 2006. We were searching for a church relatively close to home. I decided to try PCPC. My children were already taking piano here, and I already knew several members. I have to say, since I have been here, I have been welcomed with open arms. My children and I have been blessed to be a part of the PCPC family. We became affiliated with PCPC in 2013. We became members around 2015.

DM: This is an exciting opportunity for you and for our church. Any time one of us has a ministry opportunity, we all have a share in it. How can we help?

TO: Please pray for me and those I will be helping during this time, as well as my own family. Anyone who wants to help support the trip can go to <https://www.youcaring.com/handofhope-957502>.

DM: We'll definitely pray for you. Please give us a report when you return. We'll be anxious to hear what happens.

“ It is my first mission trip. I am a little nervous and excited of the unknown. ”

A Class on ECO's Essential Tenets

Our denomination, ECO (A Covenant Order of Evangelical Presbyterians), has a document called the Essential Tenets. This is a three-page statement of our most important beliefs. According to our policy, "Those who are invited to take significant leadership roles in the congregation shall ... agree with the Essential Tenets of ECO" [1.0305]. This means not only pastors, elders, and deacons, but everyone who teaches or exercises leadership must adhere to the Essential Tenets. Why? Because these core convictions make us who we are.

Do you know what the Essential Tenets are? What they mean? Beginning January 6, Pastor David will teach a class on the Essential Tenets. The class will last until March 10, but will not meet on January 27 because of the ECO National Gathering. That's a 9-week course on the Essentials.

The class meets from 10:00 to 11:00 on Saturday mornings in Lower Langill. Everyone is invited! ECO has a passionate, lively faith. Come learn more about and catch the exciting vision.

You can find the Essential Tenets online at:

Coping with the Holidays: A Grief Workshop

The holidays are a lonely and painful time for many, especially those who grieve. Your grief may result from death, divorce, or even a child who has moved away and will not be home for the first time ever.

If you are approaching the holidays with apprehension, especially if you have lost a loved one in the past year, consider taking part in a special workshop designed for you. We call it, "Coping with the Holidays: A Grief Workshop." Valette Porter, who is completing her master's degree in Christian Counseling, will discuss practical ways to manage grief through the holidays. Our pastor, David Mauldin, will talk about grief from a Christian perspective and what it means to "grieve as those who have hope." Perhaps best of all, you will discover you are not alone. Your experiences, difficult as they are, are normal and are shared by many others.

The workshop will be held on Saturday, November 4, in Lower Langill, at 10:00am. It will last about an hour and a half.

This special event is open, not only to our PCPC family, but also to the community. If you know someone who has lost a loved one during the past year, please tell her or him about this opportunity. There is no cost to participants.

LEGACY FUND

The Legacy Fund was established in 2013 as an endowment fund to help ensure that future generations have the resources they need to glorify God, and to help ensure that those who follow can experience what we have enjoyed as members of this dynamic church. It is a gift that keeps on giving. The fund is managed by the Finance Committee and the current guideline is that no more than 5% of the Legacy Fund balance is spent each year. The money is used for projects with a long term benefit and not for current operations.

Your gift should be above whatever contribution you currently make as part of your regular offerings. Your gift should be significant and we ask for a minimum gift of $10,000. You can make a single cash contribution now, or you may also want to include Palm City Presbyterian as a beneficiary in your will or estate planning. If you have questions on the various giving options, you may want to talk with your financial advisor to see what is right for you. For more information, or to discuss the Legacy Fund in greater detail, you may contact Pastor Mauldin or Tom Lytle, the Chairman of the Legacy Fund committee.

If you would like to be contacted to discuss the Legacy Fund, please contact the church office.
